AROUND THE TOWN

Mr. and Mrs. B. P. Dick and son were visitors at Calgary on Saturday.

WANTED—A second hand Chat-ham incubator. Write J. A. Gateman, Neapolis.

Mr. F. Shantz of Berlin, Ont., arrived here on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Stauffer on Friday last.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. A. Macleod of Calgary were visiting friends in the Didsbury district over the week end.

WANTED—Eggs, butter and veal. Best cash prices paid. North end butcher shop. Ceaser & Johnston.

Deering mowers get all the hay. No others do. Ask the man and get your order in early with Jesse Gouge & Co., Acme.

FOR SALE—50 bushels nice smooth potatoes at 50 cents per bushel. P. P. Johnson, 3 1-2 miles east of Didsbury.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Hamm of Neapolis returned from a visit to Manitoba and Saskatchewan points on Thursday last.

Gordon Kaiser of Elmira, Ont., arrived here last week and has accepted a position with C. Hiebert & Co., hardware merchants.

Mr. Ammele Bourassa of Great Falls, Montana, was visiting his brother, Mr. Gus. Bourassa, of the Alexandra Hotel, for a few days last week.

"Tell your troubles to the policeman." If you will buy Deering mowers and binders from Jesse Gouge & Co., Acme, you will have no troubles.

Remember the old place where you can get all kinds of good strong vegetable plants also bedding and house plants. I. E. Hallman, the gardener.

E. L. Tyner is placing his bunch of pure bred horses up for auction in July. Sale will be held at J. Norquay's ranch south of Sunnyslope. Watch for further announcements and posters.

You can beat the other fellow with that girl if you will buy one of those nobby buggies of Jesse Gouge & Co., Acme. Girls are scarce in this country and it is worth the effort. Charley.

A full ear of wine and every ball guaranteed. Good wine means good temper in harvest. We will meet any competition in wine, because we can. We have the goods. Jesse Gouge & Co., Acme.

The Didsbury league football team will play at Innisfail on July 1st the last game of the series in this district. An endeavor is being made to have a Lake View team here also. One thing sure—there will be no lack of sport at our big celebration, Innisfail Province.

Miss Fry of Dundas, Ont., is the new telephone operator at the Didsbury exchange in place of Miss Smith, retired. Miss Smith has been the operator here for some years past and during that time has made many friends who will be sorry to hear that she has given up the work.

H. L. Burch of Calgary was a visitor with Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Burch over the week end.

F. A. Burch has opened a clean and commodious pool room in the Jackson block. He has put in a good line of pipes, cigars and tobaccos.

Mr. J. E. Stauffer, M. P. P., was a visitor at Edmonton last week on business connected with the railroad spur running into Carbon.

Eld. J. F. Gugin is spending the last of this week in the Three Hill country and will conduct services in the Buckeye School House and also in the Gumbo School House next Lord's Day.

The Union Bank of Canada are opening branches at St. Catharines and Berlin, Ont., Hazelton, B. C. and Netherhill, Bask. This will make 19 new branches this year.

The first league football game will be played on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock between Didsbury and Innisfail on the home grounds. This promises to be an exciting game.

Mr. H. Saxsmith of Winnipeg arrived here on Friday on a visit to his brother, Mr. G. R. Saxsmith. He was rather surprised at the size of the town and is also greatly pleased with the looks of the Didsbury district.

Owing to a collision between two freight trains at the Bow River, Calgary, on Monday evening, the north bound train was five or six hours late. A fireman had his foot cut off and an engineer was badly cut about the face.

T. J. Murphy of Westcott was a visitor at Didsbury last week. Mr. Murphy states that everything looked pretty dry down there and the people of this district have very little to complain of in the way of growth compared with that section of the country.

A meeting of baseball enthusiasts is called for Thursday evening at 9 o'clock in the Golden West sample rooms. Everybody come. A game of baseball will be played on the local grounds between Didsbury and the Melvin School District on Saturday afternoon. Get out and root for the boys.

"I hope you are not forgetting what I said about the American gunboats."

"Ah," said Britts, with a cunning smile, "our man is also a great American. He can command the sunbouts."

"Our man is a great American. He can command the sunbouts."

too, sahib. We have told him that you have the great power. He shows us that he can call upon the English ships as well, for he comes last from London. He can have both, while you have only one. Besides, he says you cannot send a message in the air without the wire unless he gives permission. He has a little machine that catches all the lightning in the air and holds it till he needs the message. Your man is a great man—next to Moham-

Britt passed his hand over his brow staggered by these statements.

"Say, he's smoother than I thought. Most men would have been—Fools enough to say that it was all puffed out about me sending wireless messages and calling out navies, but not he! And that machine for tapping the air! Say, we'd better go slow with that fellow. Shall I call him up on the phone and head off the strike?"

"Anything, Mr. Britt, to get back our servants," said Lady Deppingham, who had come up with Mr. Brown.

When Britt responded after a brief stay in the telephone booth he was perspiring freely, and his face was redder, if possible, than ever before.

"He was very peremptory at first and very agreeable in the end. I said we'd come down at 4:30. He asked me to bring some cigarettes. Say, he's a strenuous chap. He wouldn't budge for a second."

Britt and Saunders found the enemy waiting for them under the awning in front of the bank. He looked a man from the top of his head to the tip of his canvas shoes. Every inch of his long body indicated power, vitality, health. Both men were surprised by the eager, sincere manner in which he greeted them.

"Glad to see you, gentlemen," he said. He was a head taller than either, coarser and hairier, a lean but heavy figure in white cash trousers. "It's very good of you to come down. If you'll come with me I'll mix you a real American cocktail, a mint julep, a brandy smash or anything you like in season. There's a fine mint julep up my way, just luck of the milliner. It's more precious than a ruby mine, let me tell you. And yet I'll gladly exchange 300 curats of mint, Mr. Britt, for a dozen boxes of your cigarettes."

Britt, for a dozen boxes of your cigarettes. He said, "Gentlemen, I made the greatest mistake of my life in failing to bring a ton of these little white sticks out with me. I thought of Gordon gin, but kinds of vermuth, brandy, and all that sort of thing, and completely forgot the staff of life. I happen to know that you have a million packages of this, more or less, up at the chateau. My spies told me. I dare say you know that I have spies up there all the time. Don't pay any attention to them. You're at liberty to set spies on my train at any time. Here we are. This is the headquarters for the Mine Owners' Association of Japan."

He led them down a flight of steps and into a long, cool looking room some distance below the level of the street.

"The Mine Owners' association, gentlemen, comprises the entire population of Japan. Here is where I receive my clients. Here is where they receive their daily food. If you will pardon the simile, I sit in the chairs; they squat on the rugs. We talk about railroads and sapphires as if they were peanuts. Occasionally we talk about our neighbors. Shall I make three mint juleps? Here, Selim! The tea, the milk and the straws—and the bottles. Sit down, gentlemen. This is the American bar that Bardeker tells you about—the one you've searched over Europe for, I dare say."

"Reminds me of home, just a little bit," said Britt as the tall glasses were set before them. The Englishman was still clothed in raffishness. "They shan't catch me napping!" was the sober reflection of Thomas Saunders.

The enemy placed the mint in its bed of chilled ice. "The sagacity that Tawell Shags displayed in erecting an ice plant and cold storage house here is equaled only by John Wyckholme's foresightfulness in maintaining a contemporaneous mint bed. I imagine that you, gentlemen, are hoping to prove the old adage true. Between the three of us, and man to man, how can you have the heart to encroach on anything so making when we look, as we now do, upon the result of their extreme soundness of mind? Here's how!"

Selim crossed the straws, and the three men took a long and simultaneous "pull" at the refreshing liquid. Mr. Saunders felt something melt as he drew the subsequent draught with satisfying breath. It was the outer rim of his cautious reserve.

"I think we'll take you up on that proposition, to trade mint for cigarettes," said Mr. Britt. "Mr. Brown, my client, for one, will sanction the deal. How about your client, Saunders?"

"I can't say as to Lady Deppingham, but I'm quite sure his lordship will make no objection."

"Then we'll consider the deal closed. I'll send one of my boys over tomorrow with a bunch of mint. Telephone up to the bungalow when you need more. By the way, dropping into a curious, reflective air, may I ask why Lady Deppingham is permitted to ride?"

"We go through the unfrequented and perilous parts of the island?" The question was directed at the soldier.

"Perilous? What do you mean?"

"Just this, Mr. Saunders," said the enemy, leaning forward earnestly. "I'm not responsible for the acts of these islanders. There are men among them who would not hesitate to dispose of one or both of the bells if they could do it without danger to themselves. What could be more simple. Mr. Saunders, then the death of Lady Deppingham if her horse should stumble and precipitate her to the bottom of one of those deep ravines? She wouldn't be alive to tell how it really happened."

"That's absurd!" was it that Saunders could say, forgetting his julep in contemplation of the catastrophe.

"It's right," said Britt promptly. "I tell my own client on the straight and public path. He's liable to tip over too."

"Hence take your Brown," said Saunders with mild asperity. "He never rides alone."

"No need to," said the enemy coolly. "It's usually with Lady Deppingham. It's luck that Japan is free from gypsies, gentlemen."

"Oh, I say," said Saunders, "none of that talk, you know."

"There's another thing I want to speak of," said the enemy, arising to prepare the second round of juleps. "I hear that your clients and their partners for life are in the habit of gambling like fury up there."

"Gambling?" said Britt. "What rot!"

"The servants say that they play bridge every night for vast piles of rubies and turn the best of daily for sapphires uncountable. Oh, I get it straight."

"Why, man, it's all a joke. They use gun wads and simply play that they are rubies."

"My word," said Saunders, "there isn't a ruby or sapphire in the party."

"That's all right," said the enemy, standing before them with a bunch of mint in one hand and the bowl of ice in the other. "Every man in Japan thinks that your people are gambling with jewels that belong to the corporation. They think there's something crooked, I've seen. My advice to you is, stop that sort of thing."

"By Jove," said Saunders, taking a straw and at the same time staring in open mouthed wonder at the tall host, "you appeal me. It's most extraordinary."

"This is all offered in a kindly spirit, you understand. It's the magnanimous enemy. You might as well be comfortably as to die unnecessarily here. Another little suggestion, Mr. Saunders. Please Lord Deppingham that if he persists in sneaking about the ravines in search of rubies he'll get an unmanageable bullet in the back of his head some day soon. He has no right to a single ruby, even if he should be one and know what it was. Just tell him that, please, Mr. Saunders."

"I've enemy pointed them steadily through the town"

"I shall, confound him," expiended Saunders, snatching the table napkin. "He's too apish anyhow. He needs taking down."

"Ah, Selim," interrupted the enemy as the native boy entered, "no talk, eh?"

"No, excellency, the ship is not due to arrive for two weeks."

"Ah, but, Selim, you forget that I am expecting a letter from Von Ritz's wives. They promised to let me know how soon he is able to resume work at the mines."

"I hear you polished him off neatly," said Britt, with a grin.

"Just the rough edges, Mr. Britt. He is now a gem of purest ray serene. By the way, I hope you'll not make my mild suggestions amiss."

"There's nothing I object to except your power to call prices among our servants. That seems to me to be rather high handed," said Britt good-naturedly.

"No doubt you're right," agreed the other, "but you must remember that I needed the cigarettes."

"My word!" muttered Saunders admiringly. "Look here, old man," said Britt, his cheeks glowing. "It's mighty good of you to take this trouble for—"

"I don't know, I'd only ask in return that we three be a little more sociable hereafter. We're not here to cut each other's throat, you know, and we've got a deadly half year ahead of us. What say?"

For answer the two lawyers arose and shook hands with the excellent enemy. When they started for the chateau at select the soldier, with six mint juleps about his person, they were too unwell for analysis. The enemy, who had drunk but little, took a pair of eyes and plotted them steadily through the town.

The Life-Saving Service.

The mission of the life-saving service of Canada is to save human life and to provide prompt aid, when possible, to shipwrecked and distressed vessels. For this purpose, there are at present 34 life-saving stations, located by provinces as follows: New Brunswick 3, Nova Scotia 11, Prince Edward Island 3, British Columbia 4, and on the Great Lakes of Ontario 11. Each life-saving station has a life-boat, manned by a crew of seven men, including the coxswain, who commands. The coxswain is appointed by the Department of Marine and Fisheries, and is in charge of the station. His duties are to take care of the station, to select the crew, and to drill them in rough water as well as smooth, and instruct them in treating those apparently drowned.

The usual allowance to a coxswain is $75 a year, with $2 for each drill. Fourteen hours of duty each week are conducted during a season. The crew are paid $2 each per drill, and extra when engaged in service in a wreck.

Many stations have been recently equipped with new life-boats, which range in cost from $225 to $775 each. The life-saving service has many heroic rescues to its credit, but, unfortunately, the latest report, that for the first time in the history of the service, casualties involving danger to life have taken place."

Skeleton of a Giant.

An interesting archaeological discovery was made a few days ago at Ballinaculla, near Moyra, Ireland. Some workmen, in the employment of James Lardner, came upon a complete skeleton, which measured 5 feet 5 1/2 inches, and subsequently unearthed a sword, which appeared to be of the Gaelic type. (Donagh O'Keefe, A.D. 1231.) Mr. Lardner had the relics removed to his house, and communicated the discovery to the Galway Archaeological Society.

CONSCIENCE MONEY.

Reporter Has a Chat With a British Treasury Official.

"Yes," said a Treasury official, with whom the writer recently had a conversation. "We usually receive something like $50,000 a year on account of the trouble given by guilty consciences. It comes in all sorts of ways. I have known a single sovereign, wrapped up in a piece of paper, to be dropped into our letter box, with an added pencilled sentence that it was for 'conscience-money.' Then, again, we often get sums by registered letter with similar statements attached. I have opened packets containing as much as $500."

"What was your queerest experience in that kind of receipt?" I inquired.

"We got a tin box, and heavy it was, by just one morning," said the clerk. "When we opened it we found a short note saying that 'X. X. X.' wished to make amends for his deceit in returning his statement of income, and adding that we should find the amount due in sovereigns in the box. So we unpacked the small parcels there, and took from each the gold coins they enclosed. The total amounted to $1,000, which you will agree was a very good haul for one morning's work in this way."

"You mean that the strokes of luck every day?" I asked.

"Oh, no; they come very irregularly. Sometimes a whole week goes by without our receiving one, but seldom more than that. And it is curious and most interesting to have some acknowledgment of the receipt of their conscience-money in the daily paper, which is why you so often find in the press a paragraph after this style:

"X. Y. Z.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer wishes to acknowledge receipt of $750 on account of unpaid income tax for 1925."

"Or it may be that the advertisement runs in the name of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, but it is generally the same amount, no matter what the Treasury ever got at one sweep from this source, so I am told."

"$5,000, though that did not come under my own cognizance here. And, I believe, the lowest sum we ever had was a shilling, which somebody once dropped into the letter-box with the usual explanatory note."

"That defaulter must have had a very tender conscience indeed; far more than that, a more creditable one, come tax. Dodging the payment of this tax is reckoned not only right, but even creditable, by some of our best five postal orders for a pound each which could not long ago to us for conscience-money proper, and every man with a moderate income can affix the 'still, small voice' when he has succeeded in 'doing the collector.'"

"I suppose," I put in, "that the Treasury does not take any special steps to discover the personalities of any of these conscience-stricken defaulters, and to return their money to its owners unexpectedly?"

"No," he replied. "We should guard against that. I'd only ask in return that we three be a little more sociable hereafter. We're not here to cut each other's throat, you know, and we've got a deadly half year ahead of us. What say?"

Watched Comrade Hang.

An astonishing story of callousness was told last Saturday evening when a young man named Bolan calmly confessed that he had at in the prison cell and watched another man commit suicide. This prisoner, a middle-aged man named Cully, had been arrested on a charge of larceny, and placed in the same cell as the youth. During the night he produced a piece of cord from the lining of his coat. "Who is going first?" he said to Bolan. "Well, I'm not going," replied Bolan. Cully then banged himself, the youth quietly watching him while. After the tragedy the latter went to sleep with his head hanging beside him. When he was asked by the police why he had not helped Cully, he said, "I was not sure what he did. I was not going to interfere. It was not my fault."

Not Anxious For Himself.

At the storming of a fort, when scaling ladders were being placed on the private, with one foot on the ladder, was about to climb up when a young officer stepped forward and said: "Followers first, my lad. Follow me, that is where Victoria Cross is earned."

The private followed close behind him, but on reaching the top a round shot carried the officer's head down, and his body fell back.

Patting the ladder and swinging aside as if to allow those behind him to pass, shouted, "Reckless, that is the way to die. Follow me, that's anxious for the Victoria Cross!"—London Globe.

England's Oldest Tree.

A tree of the oak variety, the residence of the Earl of Dufferin, Bristol, is probably the oldest tree in England. It is 1,000 years old at least, and measures 50 feet in circumference when it branches into two distinct trunks.

ant solicitor for the big railway corporation and he has been prominent in many of the important cases of the big legal adjustments of the corporation since, appearing as G.T.R. counsel in nearly all the important cases. The company has had before the Railway Board at Ottawa. Last January he was made head solicitor of the company.

In connection with his retirement, Mr. Cowan states that his relations with the general manager, Mr. Hay, have been of the most cordial character, but he prefers to enter general practice, as the railway legal business tends to place one in a rut and the openings for railway work are limited in Canada. In 1904 he was first called to the Ontario bar, and in 1906 he entered the political arena in South

Too Late.

At luncheon at Buckingham Palace one of the young sons of King George excitedly said to the late King Edward: "Oh, grandpa, when the King interposed with some severity."

"Little boys should be seen and not heard. Go on with your luncheon and don't talk."

The small prince collapsed. Presently King Edward said to him, re- sponding to the boy's remark that you were going to say."

The little prince with a world of mischief said to his grandpa, "It is too late."

King Edward said: "Nonsense! If it was worth saying five minutes ago it is worth saying now."

No, grandpa, said the little prince. There was a big green worm in your salad and you've eaten him."

Abortion in Mares

Below is a brief description of the disease, its causes and preventative as given by Dr. H. G. Reed, George town, Ont.

THERE IS NO REMEDY.

It will be observed that Mr. Reed mentions the stallion as the principal agent through which the disease may be spread.

If one mare in a herd has aborted the owner should then get busy. Isolation and disinfectants are the agents upon which he should rely. Lime for the stable floors and creolin and carbolic acid for disinfecting the mare are recommended.

Certain practices very common throughout the country should be discontinued.

1. Carrying hay behind a mare that has aborted and feeding it to other mares.

2. Throwing bedding from the stall of an aborting mare on a pile to which other mares have access.

3. Permitting mares in foal to remain in the same feed lot or pasture with an affected animal.

CONTAGIOUS ABORTION IN MARES.

Cases of contagious abortion in mares (while somewhat rare as compared with the same trouble in cows) are occasionally met with. In both the cow and the mare the disease is due to the action of a germ which gains access to the uterus (womb) and sets up a catarrh of that organ which breaks down the adhesion between the walls of the uterus and the foetal membranes and abortion is the result.

The germ may get into the uterus through the generative organs, or by means of the general blood circulation after having been swallowed in the food. At one time it was believed that the same germ was responsible for the disease in both cow and mare, but recent investigations go to prove that the germs are not identical.

Mares have been inoculated with the germ from diseased cows and yet no abortion took place. Abortion in the mare usually occurs from the 4th to the 9th month of pregnancy.

Symptoms—Often no premonitory symptoms are noticed. The mammary gland is usually enlarged, the lining membrane of the vagina reddened with an offensive discharge from the vulva which often persists for a considerable time after abortion has occurred. In many cases the labour pains will be very severe and violent, much more so than would likely be the case in a full term delivery.

Treatment—If the act of abortion has begun no treatment can stop it, consequently we have to turn our attention to preventative measures. The foetus (which is usually born dead) and the afterbirth and all discharges from the vagina should be carefully gathered and buried or buried. The surroundings, such as walls, floor and mangers should be thoroughly washed with hot water and then disinfected by the application of a watery solution of bichloride of mercury at the strength of 1 to 1,000 or a 2 per cent solution of carbolic acid. The hind quarters and external genitals and around root of tail should be washed daily with either of the above preparations, and also the uterus should be flushed out daily with a lukewarm one-half per cent, watery solution of creolin and this should be done until all discharge from the vagina had ceased. The mare should not be bred again until after six weeks from her full term date had passed and not then unless all discharge from genitals had ceased. When abortion takes place at pasture, no pregnant mares should be allowed to graze on it for at least three months.

The greatest care should be taken by the attendant on a diseased mare to keep some special suit for such work and to remove it and wash his hands before going around healthy mares.

In case of stallions having served a diseased suspected mare, the penis and sheath should be washed with a one-half per cent, watery solution of creolin and as the stallion is by far the most likely agent to distribute the disease, owners of such horses cannot be too careful in this matter. It is a good and safe practice for all grooms to follow after every service and if it were more generally observed it would tend strongly to limit the ravages not only of abortion, but other genital diseases.

Experimenting Cost $100 $1.00 Paid for the Cure

Rheumatism Disappeared When the Poisons Were Removed from the System by DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Experimenting is sometimes necessary and almost always expensive. It is usually wise to let others do the experimenting and profit by their experience.

When it is a matter of regulating the liver, kidneys and bowels and driving out of the system the poisons which cause rheumatism, backache, lumbago and other pains and aches, experience has proven that Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills are the most effective treatment available. They are different from ordinary kidney medicine in that they regulate the liver and bowels, as well as the kidneys, and in that way get at the very source of trouble.

Let others experiment if they will. This letter shows what experimenting cost one man, and many have had somewhat similar experience.

Mr. James Clarke, Maidstone, Sask.

"I have great pleasure in testifying to the good results I have obtained by using Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. For four years I suffered from Rheumatism in my arms and back, and back and back, until my arms above my head. I tried nearly all the advertised remedies. Lots of them were to be sure cures, but none of them gave me relief.

"I was then persuaded to use Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills and soon found relief. By following up this treatment a thorough cure was brought about and for six months I have been free from rheumatism. It cost me at least one hundred dollars in experimenting before using Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills, which cured me at the cost of 25 cents a box."

You can be sure of definite, beneficial results when you use Dr. Chase's Kidney and Liver Pills. One pill a dose. 25 cents a box. All dealers, or Edman, Bates & Co., Toronto. Write for free copy of Dr. Chase's Recipes.

King Edward's Sympathy

Three examples of King Edward's sympathy for the suffering were quoted by Father Bernard Vaughan in a sermon in London. The first showed his personal interest in the sickness of a domestic servant; the second, his care for a blind boy. The third was a pathetic story of a child, a little breadwinner in an East End slum. She was thrown out of work by lung trouble, and wrote to the King begging him to send her to some place for open-air treatment. The girl's illness was visited by a friend of the King, who reported the genuine character of the case. The child was sent away by the King for six months, and is now in good health and at work in a factory.

A Swedenborg Anniversary

The hundredth anniversary of the Swedenborg Society of London, founded in 1819, will be the occasion of a gathering from all parts of the world of an international congress of the students and admirers of Emanuel Swedenborg, to be held in the city of London, July 5 to 8 inclusive. The assembly is not an ecclesiastical or sectarian one, but a meeting to be devoted to the consideration of Swedenborg's metaphysical and scientific philosophy and psychology as well as in theology to the higher thought and investigation of the world today.

WHY BACKS ACHE

The Kidneys Seldom to Blame
—The Trouble Due to Blood Impurities

There is more nonsense talked about backache than any other disease. Some people have been frightened into the belief that backache means deadly kidney trouble. That is utter rubbish. As a matter of fact, backache is not a kidney ailment, but a blood impurity. It is twenty has anything to do with the kidneys. Most backaches come from other causes. Kidney drugs can't possibly cure that. You need something to brace up and give you new strength. Backache is exactly what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do. Other backaches are really muscular rheumatism and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured the worst cases of rheumatism by driving the poisonous acid out of the blood. Other backaches are the symptoms of ordinary ailments such as influenza, indigestion, constipation and liver complaint. In many backaches often come from the troubles that follow so surely on the feet of a man who has a bad blood supply. The one way to cure those backaches is to strike at the root of the trouble. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which enrich the blood and bring strength to aching backs and back nerves.

GRAHAME WHITE, AVIATOR.

Rejected the Army to Become a Pioneer in Motoring.

Mr. Grahame White strikes one as a typical flying man. Young (he is only just thirty), tall, and lithe, he looks as hard as nail and gives the impression of being practically without nerves.

He was originally intended for the army, but his taste lay in the direction of engineering, and he followed his inclination. His love of sport is inherited, his father being a famous yachtsman. At Bedford Grammar School young Grahame White is chiefly remembered for his success as a cyclist. When fifteen he and his brother were joint owners of a small motor-car, and his experiences with this machine tempted him to the motor industry. He not only established a business for making motors, cars, but raced them, winning many prizes.

From motoring to aviation was but a natural step. His early experience with motors was, of course, of considerable service to him in his flying experiments, but his connection with aviation is quite recent. He had not even seen any flying until the Rhine racing last August. He was so taken with the new sport that he there and then ordered a biplane machine and was himself astonished at the quickness with which he learned to fly.

Less than a month ago he acquired the latest improved type of Farman biplane, fitted with a Gnome fifty-horse-power rotary motor, and his instant mastery of this wonderful machine at once inspired him to try for the Manchester record.

A lucky attempt was made recently by Mr. White to win the prize of $50,000, and at first his success seemed assured.

He was compelled by adverse weather and engine trouble to wait, at Leiheld, with sixty-nine miles still to travel, and too late to comply with the conditions under which the prize is offered.

Mr. White started on his great journey from Park Royal, his mother and sister being present to wish him good luck.

The machine rose easily and gracefully, the engine worked beautifully, and everything thus orderly promised well for the daring young aviator's trip.

Flying splendidly, Mr. White soon left the accompanying motor-cars behind. At one period he attained a speed of 100 miles an hour.

At Rugby he made the first of the two stops he was allowed on the journey, and after having some refreshments left for Crew, which was to be his second halting-place.

Fortune, however, decreed otherwise, for, numbed with cold, and feeling sorely in need of rest, Mr. White descended from his machine at Halesmore, near Leiheld.

While awaiting more favorable conditions his plane was seized by a boisterous wind and overturned, suffering damage that was repaired in time for a flight the following week only by the herculean exertion on the part of his mechanics.

Scottish and Irish Bogs.

The recent "bog-side" in County Roscommon, recalls the fact that Ireland has still close on 2,500,000 acres of bogland, varying in depth from fifteen feet to a few inches. Scotland is also a bog country. Ramsay Moor, for instance, is nearly twenty miles square. Moss Flanders, in Yorkshire, contains over 10,000 acres of peat, and it is reported that the deep Black Moss contains 50,000 cubic yards of peat. The reason why so few calamitous bog-side take place in Scotland compared with Ireland is due to the varying conditions of the bogs, their situation, and the higher cultivation of neighboring lands. After a long spell of rain—the usual forerunner of an Irish bog-side—great quantities of water accumulate at the bottom of the bog. The mosses and dense plant life on the surface, or close to the surface, prevent excretion, and the pressure of the steadily accumulating water either rises the superincumbent mass and makes it overflow. Its natural boundaries, or bursts a subterranean passage. Where, however, the fringe of the bog has been reclaimed, as in the case of most of the Scottish bogs and the land in the neighborhood of drained and more or less cultivated, artificial escapes are created which drain off the floods. Hence the main reason for the scarcity of bog-side in Scotland compared with Ireland where the bog lands are still in a state of nature.

A Witty Bishop.

Doctor Stubbs disliked very much counsels which squares and churchwardens sometimes made to him about hard-working parish priests. On one occasion a layman came to him and said complaints about the enormities of some vicar, his ritualistic practices and observances.

"Why, my lord, before he begins his sermon he actually kisses his stole!" said this irate paragon.

"Well, well, Mr. Scandalous," replied the bishop, "it is probable that is better than he stole his kisses."

Another good churchwarden complained to the bishop of a curate who dared to wear a hood that some what resembled that of an assassin.

"The man has a fine piece of machinery by dropping a rusty nail into it," said the bishop.

"Don't say that, Mr. Jones," urged the bishop, "say a 'lasswood'!"

Semi-Steel Fire-Pot—Not Gray Iron

A FIRE-POT of a furnace should be able to endure tremendous heat and to repel the attacks of sulphur fumes.

The material commonly used for a fire-pot is gray iron. The Sunshine fire-pot is Semi-Steel.

Now, avoiding technical terms, gray iron has what may be called "open" pores. Through these "open" pores the destructive sulphur fumes attack the iron and hasten disintegration.

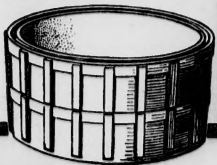

On the other hand, Semi-Steel is a close-grained material, with a smooth-glass surface which practically seals or "closes" up the pores. Semi-Steel easily repels the attacks of gas fumes and thus greatly prolongs the life of the fire-pot.

A Semi-Steel fire-pot weighs 20 per cent. heavier than the same size and pattern in gray iron. It is therefore better able to endure tremendous heat.

Semi-Steel is made by an exclusive McClary process. You can only get a Semi-Steel fire-pot with a McClary furnace. That is one strong reason why you should have the Sunshine installed in your home. Our agent in your locality will tell you many other reasons. Ask him.

Remember, the Sunshine is guaranteed by the largest makers of furnaces in British Empire, to heat your home to your entire satisfaction.

More about the Hog Question

Live hogs have been selling as high as $10.75 per hundred pounds. This is certainly a phenomenal price. Some time back when hogs were selling at $9.00 per hundred pounds it was thought that they had reached the top notch. They have, however, passed that mark by $1.75.

Surely no better inducement could be given to hog raisers than this, and now is their time to get busy. According to reports, Canadian hogs are selling for a higher figure than hogs in the United States, and this speaks well for the fairness of those who buy the live stock.

There is an extreme shortage of hogs in Canada, and the situation is reaching the stage of seriousness.
